Atlanta Painter Daniel Zimmerman Debuts Companions at High Point Market

Atlanta-based artist Daniel Zimmerman brings Companions, a new collection of oil paintings, to the Fall 2026 High Point Market, October 17–21, in the Salon Suites at Market Square, Space G-6049. The collection features pairs of parrots, a watchful leopard, and lush botanicals, painted in thick, expressive oil and set in antique gilded frames.

The collection began at home. Zimmerman hung one of his favorite parrot paintings near his own front entrance and found that it felt less like décor and more like a presence in the room, a companion he looked forward to seeing each day. Wondering whether that lone parrot might be lonely, he began painting the birds in pairs. The result is a body of work about togetherness: the friendships and unplanned moments that give color to our lives.

At Market, Zimmerman's space is set up as a living room, complete with a full bar, so visitors can experience the paintings the way they are meant to be lived with: at home, among friends. Joining him in the space, The Hunt Collection will bring a selection of antique English smalls, which will be available in the booth.

In the Artist's Words

“He feels like a companion, and I look forward to seeing him each day.”

ON THE PARROT THAT STARTED THE COLLECTION

“I thought about them being together in perpetuity – a world free of loneliness – isn’t that what we all sort of long for?”

ON PAINTING THE BIRDS IN PAIRS

“Our lives co-mingle with others, and we become wonderfully intertwined.”

ON TOGETHERNESS

Zimmerman describes painting freely and abundantly before pausing to study what has accumulated. As this set of works emerged, companionship kept appearing and reappearing: pairs perched side by side, creatures who are never alone. He hopes each piece will find a place in someone’s home and become a joyful part of their daily routine.

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Daniel Zimmerman

Daniel Zimmerman is an Atlanta-based painter known for large-scale oil paintings of plants, flowers, animals, and portraits. His canvases are built from heavy, textural paint and saturated color, in a style that draws on impressionism, realism, and neo-expressionism. His aim is for viewers to be stopped in their tracks, as if they had walked into a garden they didn't know existed.

His love of botanicals took root in a youth spent in greenhouses and working outdoors. A childhood visit to an artist's studio showed him that painting could be a whole way of life, and he has built his own life around that idea. On a whim, he bought a derelict warehouse and spent years transforming it into a 5,000-square-foot studio surrounded by gardens, which he cultivates each year as a source of inspiration.

Zimmerman's work is held in private collections throughout the United States and parts of Europe. He shows annually at CONTEXT during Art Miami and is a returning exhibitor at High Point Market. He is self-represented and works with a team for showings, sales, and installation across the country.
