COMPANY INFORMATION

Feeney is a design-driven manufacturer of architectural railing systems that bring clarity, openness, and precision to the built environment. For over 70 years, we've partnered with architects, designers, and builders to create solutions that balance performance with refined aesthetics.

Our product portfolio includes stainless steel cable railing, aluminum railing systems, and a curated range of design-forward infill options—including our Kerrie Kelly laser-cut panels—offering added texture, pattern, and visual interest. These solutions provide flexibility across residential and commercial applications while maintaining clean lines and minimal visual obstruction.

With an emphasis on material integrity and thoughtful engineering, Feeney systems are designed to integrate seamlessly into modern spaces, enhancing light, views, and flow.

At High Point Market, we're focused on connecting with the design community to explore how railing can contribute to the overall architectural expression of a space—not just as a functional element, but as an intentional part of the design story.
