Collected by Schwung began with a collector's instinct: to pause, look closer, and recognize something worth keeping. Sometimes, a mirror opens the door to an entirely different world.

Once you start looking, the unexpected draws you in. A curious creature, an unusual silhouette, a detail you cannot quite explain. Discovery begins long before you know the whole story.

Some discoveries carry fragments of a larger past. Carved panels once belonged to another setting; brought into a new space, they let its history become part of someone else's everyday life.

Look closer, and history becomes tangible. Thread, color, and patient repetition reveal the work of human hands. Our eye follows that care across antiques, art, and contemporary craft.

Then comes the piece you never thought to look for. A musical instrument among furniture and art. We leave room for these surprises; they are often what makes a collection feel personal.

From there, the story returns to daily life. A chair invites you to sit, a table gathers people, a lamp changes the evening. The objects we choose become part of the way we live.

As a room takes shape, different eras find common ground. An antique can sit beside an artisan's new creation, connected by proportion, material, or simply the pleasure of seeing them together.

And the collection keeps moving. Into gardens, onto tables, over a shoulder, and into another generation's hands. We keep discovering; you decide where each object's next chapter begins.
